The advances occurring in features and technology for outdoor kitchens has not only opened up advanced possibilities in functionality, but also those relating to placement and elevations,” states Ryan Hughes, Founder and Creative Director, Ryan Hughes Design. “No longer are outdoor kitchens a simple extension of or required to be adjacent to interior spaces. They can be designed to be fully self-contained with personalized functionality and located wherever outdoor entertaining experiences are desired.” Outdoor durability or performance features are found in state-of-the-art outdoor grills from smokers to griddles, or stainless appliances from refrigeration to pizza ovens, warming trays to beverage centers. Kitchen designs are also exhibiting luxury natural elements with an expanding use of metal, stone or tile on surfaces. Whether horizontal countertops or vertical feature walls, luxe living is finding its way into outdoor living design.
