In exterior design, the key to drawing in guests or setting the tone for the space, much like a foyer does, is accomplished by elements and their placement. You can provide a welcoming vibe through the successful use of texture found in surfaces or features, including glistening tile or geometrically placed turf. Dramatic landscape elements can also draw one in via planters or outdoor lighting that induces an ambiance.

"For outdoor designs, areas that welcome and ultimately set the tone are not predicated by walls. Visually, lines also are essential to welcome the residents or guests into the exterior spaces while drawing the eye to what lies beyond," said Ryan Hughes. "The key is the proper placement of items throughout."
